

SHOPPING WITH FRANCES NEILSON

The Columbia Players' Popular Leading Lady

MISS NEILSON'S own words best tell her impressions of Washington shops. "No other city in the United States has anything on Washington in regard to the character of its shops. Of course larger cities have more shops, but I find here at least one shop for every kind that compares favorably with the best other cities have to offer."

The pictures that accompany this article tell more clearly where Miss Neilson went and what she did than the most detailed story. They will prove particularly enlightening to many Washington women who want to know where to get "this" or "that."

More and more Washington women each season find that they can best meet their many shopping requirements right here at home. And it is but natural that the National Capital should be representative of the entire country in a shopping way, just as it is representative of the entire country in a political way.

You, who are familiar with the shopping centers of other large cities will do well to make a comparison.

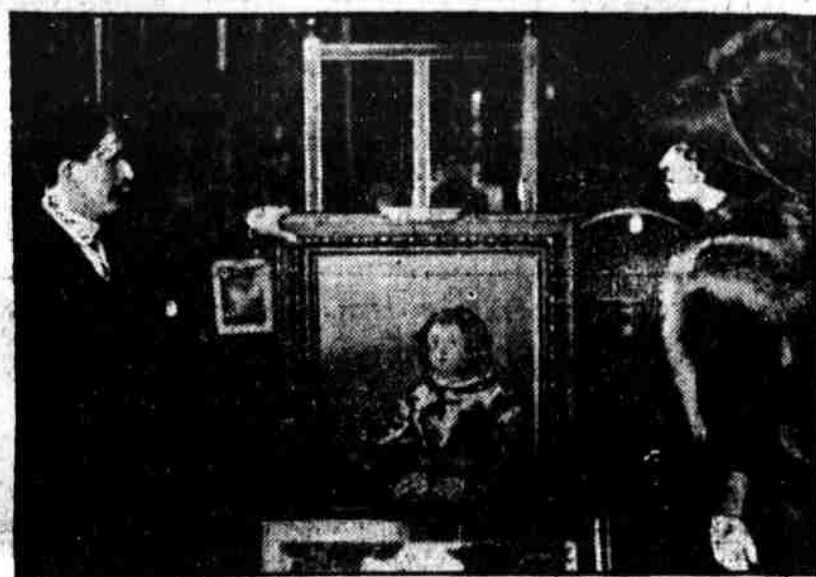

AT Affleck's Drug Store, 15th and F Streets N. W., the man with the camera caught Miss Neilson in the act of buying a bottle of Blake's Sage Hair Tonic.

MISS NEILSON making a personal selection of furniture at Jackson Bros., Inc., 915-25 7th Street, while placing an order for the necessary furniture for a stage setting at the Columbia.

MISS NEILSON finds a visit to Lerch's, 826 12th Street, essential in order that these famous cleaners can keep her wardrobe spotless.

MISS NEILSON in the act of selecting some pictures for a stage setting in one of the Columbia Players' coming productions. Of course, this picture was taken at Venable's Art Gallery, 1225 G Street.

SHOPPING tours are fatiguing and the star role in a stock company performance is no light task. Here the camera finds Miss Neilson in her dressing room, just before the performance of the "Squaw Man" getting rid of the fatigue of the day's shopping and its attendant headache, and refreshing herself for the task of the evening by an application of Mustard Campholine. An actress like Miss Neilson finds this old home remedy particularly beneficial in cases of sore throat, hoarseness and cold, bringing speedy relief so necessary when one has eight regular performances and any number of rehearsals on her hands every week.

MISS NEILSON finds the moving picture theater a good place of recreation in which to spend a few minutes' time. The man with the camera "caught her in the act" of leaving the Plaza Theater on 9th Street, near E.

OF COURSE, the stunning gowns which Miss Neilson wears require the services of such a capable corsetiere as Miss Ada C. Payne, 925 1/2 G Street, the Kabo Corsetless Corset being a particular favorite.

REED'S Auto Supply House, 1218 18th Street N. W., Miss Neilson finds can best furnish her auto supplies. The photographer caught her trying on one of those new collapsible straw motor bonnets.

MOST people will readily agree with Miss Neilson that The Ebbitt is the place to go for after-the-theater suppers.

AND, of course, Miss Neilson just has to have a copy of The Washington Times every day.

MISS NEILSON deciding on a tennis racket at the store of the National Sporting Goods Company, 424 9th Street.